

HALL OF FAME

■ Three more industry legends were inducted into Property Week's Hall of Fame at this year's awards

Roy Richardson

Roy Richardson founded Black Country-based developer Richardson with his twin brother, Don, in the late 1940s.

Under Roy's stewardship, the company became one of the West Midlands' most important developers, taking on high-profile and complex projects including the building of Merry Hill shopping centre.

Its other schemes in the region included Birmingham's £90m Star City leisure complex and Fort retail park, as well as two major leisure schemes on Broad Street.

Now run by his three sons, the business operates across the UK and internationally.

In a video shown on the night, Richardson said: "I'm very proud of all the things our family business has contributed to society, creating tens of thousands of jobs and supporting essential services such as schools and hospitals. Winning this award means a great deal to me, my family and all the loyal and dedicated staff who have worked hard to receive this sort of national recognition."

Jackie Sadek

Jackie Sadek has enjoyed a long and varied career in regeneration. She was chief operating officer at Regeneration UK for more than a decade and has held key roles at the London Docklands Development Corporation and CBRE.

She is now a writer and broadcaster and served as specialist adviser to government on urban regeneration between 2014 and 2016. Two years ago, she co-wrote the book Broken Homes on Britain's housing crisis. Last year, she was appointed chair of Ipswich Vision, an initiative that aims to transform the town centre over the next five years.

Speaking at the awards, Sadek said she was overwhelmed to be entered into the Hall of Fame. "When I started in this industry 40 years ago, I remember going into rooms and there would be 25 people there and I would be the only woman. I'm delighted to receive an award for all the things I've tried to do for the industry."

Rob Bould

Rob Bould made his name during a 40-year spell at real estate advisory firm GVA UK, which later merged to become Bilfinger GVA.

During his time at the company, Bould held a number of senior posts including the role of chief executive. He later went on to become executive vice-president of Bilfinger Real Estate before setting up his own commercial real estate consultancy six years ago.

Bould is a past chair and life member of the Investment Property Forum, and also served as chair of the property industry charity LandAid for three years up until this March.

Collecting the award on behalf of Bould, Paul Morrish, chief executive of LandAid, said Bould had made a fantastic contribution to the sector over many years. "The work he has done for LandAid has been absolutely legendary," said Morrish. "As the CEO to his chair, I take my hat off and pay respect to what he's done."
